With the aid of these repentant Mahoneites, and of the reserves not brought into action either last year or the year before, the real people of Virginia will win next month just such a victory as they won in 1889.

The congressional districts are expected to go as follows:

Which one of the districts we have claimed can the Cofficienties earry? Look over the list and see for yourselves. Remember, too, that there are ninety thousand voters in Virginia who did not vote in 1880, and one hundred and fifty thousand who did not vote in 1879. These last are our reserves. We called out sixty thousand of them last year, and beat the Research of the ninety of the production of them last year, and beat the Research of the Ningh of sand of them last year, and best the Readjusters more than three to one. ## A Card from J. H. H. Figgat.

RICHMOND, October 15, 1881. Editors Dispatch: I arrived in this city last evening on my way to Yorktown, and read in this morning's Whig a card from H. H. Riddelberger, which a double obligation requires me to answer at once. The card is a vulgar and scurrilous attack upon me personally, and it is another step in what I believe to be a determined effort to deceive the people of Virginia in order to influence the result of the present political contest.

principles of "the Code" I should not be required now to challenge the writer, who, prior to the publication of his card, was smarting under at least two personal attacks published in this city, both of which under "the Code" required notice and action from him. If he is engaged in meeting these he probably has his hands full at present, and if he intends to evade the issue in these contests no recognizer of "the Code" is under any further obligation to notice him. But it is perhaps incumbent on me to say at once that I do not recognize "the Code," being a professor of the Christian religion. Not that I sun a non-combatant in the general sense in non-combatant in the general sense in which that word is used; for I stand ready to maintain my principles and my honor at any hazard, and to defend them, if need Minister Company. The order was I very by the high-constable upon the city bill-poster, who refused to obey it. What course the matter will take is not known.

The Conservative Convention which met be, with my life.

As to the general character of Mr. Riddleberger's eard, I have to say that the suggestion that I attempted to avoid responsibility for the late publication in the Dispatch signed by Messrs. McDowell, Godwin, and myself, by placing my name in the middle, is simply puerile. These two gentlemen and myself prepared the statement together, signed it together, are all three principals, and are all three jointly and severally bound for what it contains, and are all ready to maintain it. Such intent to violate District, charging him with intent to violate District, charging him with intent to violate District law in his purpose and severally bound for what it contains, and are all ready to maintain it. Such flings do not come with a very good grace from one who—as the people of this Commonwealth believe, and as I believe, Mr. Editor—was engaged in bringing out the charges against Major Daniel and George D. Wise of complicity in an infamous fraud, from a place of supposed safety behind the name of another, and who has just been publicly dragged from his concalment by one of the gentlemen who was not baffled by the sham disguise.

In general reply to Mr. Riddleberger I.

room, and that it was furnished to them; that they were in that room some time with Wilson; that Riddleberger ordered a quantity of liquor to be sent up to them; that Leigh Wilson came from the hotel and told Major McDowell, Dr. Godwin, and myself what we have stated in our communication to Mr. Keiley; that still later another person who was in the party at the hotel said, "We have got old Leigh all solid again," and "old Leigh" demurred thereto and said, "Damned if I have gone back on anything yet." Proof is in existence, though it restribly may not be old-sized for though it possibly may not be obtained for publication, of other facts that will cause publication, of other facts that will cause the ears of the Readjuster party to tingle. It is hardly worth while to notice that Mr. Riddleberger denies, and in the denial confesses the truth of what he elegantly terms "Lie No. 1" of the Dispatch communication. It is certainly said that Riddlebeger had refused to speak to Leigh Wilson after the publication of the Blair letters. It is certainly true that Thomas Wilson and Judge Mays had nothing to do with Leigh Wilson during all the time he RECHMOND, VA., October 17, 1881.

Wilson and Judge Mays had nothing to do with Leigh Wilson during all the time he was in Botetourt up to that Monday, October 28: Fluvanna also, and not only spoke to him, but shock hands with him and addressed him by his first name; and if that is not "cordially meeting" a man who had been a short time before denounced by the whole Readjuster party as a forger and a liar, we do not understand free cordiality in Virginia.

It may not be improper, Mr. Editor, to note that Mr. Hiddleberger in his eard no where denies that mency was paid or promised at Fineastle to Wilson for his recantation, nor even that he (Riddleberger) knew of liss payment or promise, but only denies that he (Riddleberger) suggested or thought of suggesting, &c., any such consideration for the Wilson letter. And is should be equally borne in mind that our communication does not charge Mr. Riddleberger with the payment. That some such payment or promise to Wilson, at the time and under the circumstances set out by us, was made, I have no sort of doubt.

As to the insinuations in the card that I wrote or was the instrument of Wilson's writing to the Whig or Dispatch, or Birhmond Dispatch. either, I pronounce absolutely false. I did not even know until after this affair that wilson had written either to the Whig on the Dispatch, or to Mr. Keiley. I had no conversation or communication with Leigh and earnestness as that no man can longer reasonably doubt that Daniel. Barbotz, and McKinney will be elected triumphantly on the 8th of next month.

It is a national contest in which the Democrats of Virginia are now engaged. The conduct of General Marbone in allying himself with the Republican party, or rather we should say in becoming a Republican out and out, has opened the eyes.

It is contents.

I am unwilling to bandy epithets with such a man as Mr. Riddleberger, but will content myself with proving the facts as stated by me, and leave the public to pludge between us. I deemed it right to expose a plot to corrupt a miserably weak and depraved creature, and think we were rendering loyal service to the cause of right in so doing, and have no apologies to make for our action. Respectfully, &c.,
